Colnbrook, over recent years, has become a dumping ground for all and sundry. This has not only had an affect of a blight on the countryside, but also an addition to health issues. We have undergone the construction of a large waste incinerator that expels toxic fumes into the air 24 hours a day, we are encapsulated by two of the busiest motorways in the country, as well as living directly beneath the flightpath into Heathrow Airport. As a result, Colnbrook already has a very low mortality rate.

Building a massive Data Centre (the size of Wembley Stadium) on the little greenbelt land remaining, will not only add to the degeneration of the village, (and its inhabitants), it will also put an enormous strain on local resources.

These Data Centres produce high decibels of noise, which we can certainly do without. Traffic is already problematic around this part of the village, any addition would certainly not enhance the situation.

With such a large structure, there are residual risks associated with defences in an area with an already high water table where flooding is frequent. The proposed site would seriously affect wildlife who have made homes of the nearby lakes and woodland. Any disruption would cause havoc to the environment.

With this in mind, I would fiercely object to the planning proposal.
